Young's candidates: Elected, not appointed

By KEITH HILL

One of the Utah State Capitol's grandest traditions is the annual walk by a larger-than-life statue of Brigham Young, while an is almost always unanimous in favor of the bishop's selection. This process resembles early Utah politics, he said.

Ross "Rocky" Anderson, a candidate for Salt Lake City mayor, said he is glad the political situation in Utah has changed. Although Anderson was born into an LDS family, he has not been active since he was a teenager.

"Religion should not play a role in politics at all. My religious practices are my own business. It is very private," he said.

Anderson's opponent, Stuart Reid, has not kept his religious practices private in the race. One of his campaign brochures states that he was an LDS police chaplain and used to work for the LDS Church's public affairs office. Despite the LDS Church's influence in Utah, many non-LDS candidates have won elections in Utah during the 20th Century. Salt Lake City's outgoing mayor, Deedee Corradini, said religion played an insignificant role in the two races she won. Corradini, a Protestant, ran against LDS candidates in 1991 and 1995.

This is a contrast to the Congressional race for a territorial delegate in 1867. The LDS candidate received about 15,000 votes while his non-LDS opponent scored 105, Cannon said.

However, as Utah became more diverse and statehood was finally granted, the LDS Church began to withdraw from the political scene because of pressure from federal officials, Cannon said.

Recently, the LDS Church's First Presidency recently sent out a letter reminding members that the church does not endorse any candidate for office — times have changed.

So...Who should I put into office this year?

Candidates discuss Provo housing concerns

By ROB ROGERS

Talk about issues facing Provo flattered like flies around Thursday night's city council candidate debate.

Talk of housing shortages and heavy traffic and the problems they bring to Provo dominated the dialogue between candidates and residents. Almost unanimously candidates agreed that the greatest problem facing Provo was housing.

Growth in Provo was one of the first issues brought up by candidates when asked what was the greatest problem facing the city.

"We can be a one university town, but we can't be a two university town," candidate Stan Lockhart said. "UVSC is growing exponentially and we're housing their students."

Incumbent Dennis Poulsen suggested that BYU form some kind of community relations department to help Provo deal with the housing concern. He noted that relations also need to be established with the Orem City Council.

Heavy traffic was a concern voiced by a number of the candidates. Incumbent Mark Hathaway pointed to the many federal grants for road construction that have been awarded to the city. He also mentioned the need to find alternative modes of transportation for BYU students.

"I want a shuttle bus. I don't want freshman and sophomores to have cars. We love the kids but the cars are a problem," said Hathaway.

Candidate and BYU student Jon Selden said that the approximate 30,000 students in Provo should have a voice in all city affairs. "We want to participate. We do care, we do consider ourselves residents," Selden said.

Incumbent David Rail spoke of cooperation already in place between city administrators and BYU. City Council is working with BYU on a project called SCAMP, South Campus Area Master Plan. SCAMP would outline the future growth of the area directly south of campus, focussing on cooperation between the city and BYU.

"I think as we solve the problem with housing, we'll solve the problem with traffic," Rail said.

Candidate Melanie McCoard indicated problems in Provo spark from money.

"Money has come to Provo and that changes everything," she said.

The issue of absentee landlords was brought up, sparked by the problems facing the Tree Streets neighborhood.

"Enforce the laws in place," Candidate Richard Dougan said. He too suggested cooperation with BYU to help alleviate all the problems caused by the housing shortage.

Selden said if Provo would build more large apartment complexes less students would be forced to look to houses as a place to live.

Provo's proposal to buy a minor league baseball team and the future of undeveloped areas were also discussed by candidates.

Coach LaVell Edwards said his 250th career victory as his 15th-ranked Cougars continue a classic rivalry with Air Force Falcons at 1 p.m. a dominating road team of late, winning seven consecutive games away from home, including 12 of its last 14 dating back to 1997.

Last year, the Falcons proved to be tough away from Falcon Stadium once again when the team met up with BYU in Las Vegas. Trailing by seven late in the WAC Championship game, Air Force rallied by scoring two touchdowns in the last four minutes to knock off BYU 20-13.

The loss still doesn't sit well with Edwards.

"That was probably one of the more disappointing games we've played in a while," Edwards said. "I felt like we gave the game away."

Quarterback Kevin Feterik hasn't gotten over the disappointing loss either.

"It's still fresh in our minds every time we see film of them," Feterik said. "It makes us sick."

This year's Cougar squad is primed and ready to make amends for last year's heartbreaking defeat.

Feterik continues to lead a deadly offensive attack that has averaged 34.4 points per game and ranks first in the Mountain West Conference and eighth in the nation with 462.9 total yards per contest.

Despite the success, the offense found a small glitch in its arsenal last week at UNLV. Instead of scoring touchdown after touchdown, the offense struggled in the red zone and had to settle for five Owen Pochman field goals.

Japanese leading actress to cast storytelling spell at Y

By STEPHEN SMITH

Assoc. Monday Editor

Japanese culture and ghost stories will come together Saturday night as one of Japan's leading actresses performs a one-woman storytelling in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Kayoko Shiraishi, a renowned Japanese actress, as a part of her solo debut in the United States, will perform her first U.S. showing of "Hyakumonogatari" (100 Stories) Saturday.

"Shiraishi is a powerful actress who is recognized on a world-class stage," said Paula Lawrence, the performing arts director for the Japan Society.

The Japan Society of New York City, the BYU Performing Arts Series and the College of Humanities are sponsoring the performance.

For Saturday night's show, Shiraishi is borrowing from an old Japanese tradition of telling ghost stories in a candle-lit room amongst friends and family, Lawrence said. During Japan's Edo period (1603 - 1867 A.D.), groups would gather together, light a hundred candles in a room and tell ghost stories.

After each story, a candle would be blown out, until only one candle remained lit.

"According to tradition, if the 100th candle was blown out, something supernatural would happen in the room where the stories were being told," Lawrence said.

In an interview in Provo on Thursday, Shiraishi said when she began the project, she didn't initially set out to incorporate the tradition of hyakumonogatari into her repertoire.

"During times of the year, when I wasn't performing on stage I wanted to do a type of reading — scary stories of some kind. Hyakumonogatari worked in perfectly with the types of readings I wanted to do," Shiraishi said.

Shiraishi said despite the title of the performance, she only reads three stories at each performance.

However, once her tour is complete, Shiraishi hopes to have told a total of 99 stories.

"I won't do 100 stories," Shiraishi said with a laugh. "I'm too scared with what might happen if I do."

Coke studies remote control pricing

ATLANTA — The Coca-Cola Co. is studying wireless technology that could allow bottlers to raise or lower soda prices by remote control at certain times — say, during hot weather.

Lower prices during periods of slower sales would presumably bring in more business — unless the higher prices at other times enraged customers.

"The issue of the pricing is something we don't see happening anytime soon, if ever. You could probably make a vending machine that could fly, too, but I don't think we would do that," said spokesman Rob Baskin.

Baskin said Coke's research and development department is evaluating several technologies for new machines to allow the company to remotely collect data such as how full the machines are and how often they are visited.

Several beverage makers are interested in such data because the information could increase the machines' productivity, said Ron Sewell, president of Automated Network Solutions, a Roswell, Ga.

Navy's Blue Angels crash, kill two

MOODY AIR FORCE BASE, Ga. — A jet from the Navy's Blue Angels precision flying team crashed Thursday while trying to land during a training flight, killing two team members.

Cmdr. Jack Papp, a Navy spokesman in Pensacola, Fla., where the Blue Angels are based, confirmed the deaths. No names were released pending notification of relatives.

"The accident took place around 12:30 Thursday afternoon. They were coming in to land, practicing arrival maneuvers when this happened," said Pentagon spokesman Ken Bacon in Washington.

"The Navy does not yet have a clear picture of what happened," he said.

The crash happened near Moody Air Force Base, where the Blue Angels were scheduled to perform this weekend during the base's Community Appreciation Day.

Israel deports doomsday members

JERUSALEM — Israel will deport 17 Americans, two Britons and an Australian suspected of membership in Christian doomsday sects.

The two Britons were put on a flight to London Thursday, and 11 of the Americans are scheduled to depart for New York City early today, police spokesman Rafi Yaffe said. Seven other detainees will be deported in the coming days when space becomes available on flights, he said.

A second Australian was released because she had already purchased a plane ticket.

Israeli police arrested 21 foreign Christians on Monday for allegedly preparing the ground for groups from abroad planning apocalyptic acts ahead of the year 2000.

The raid, in a neighborhood on the Mount of Olives, was the third Israeli operation in recent months against such Christian groups.

Israel has been on increased alert for doomsday Christians who are suspected of planning violence to set off a chain of events that they maintain would bring about the second coming of Christ.

Web site tattles on gov. spending

WASHINGTON — The House Budget Committee chairman wants to hear from federal employees if they know about wasteful government spending or if they see "some crazy things that make your blood boil."

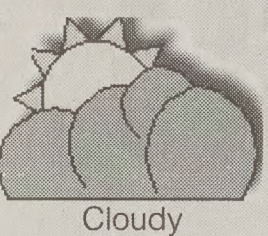

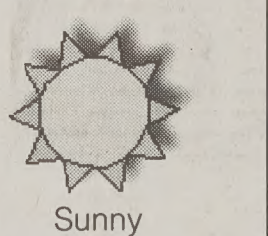

The committee's Internet site (www.house.gov/budget) has added a fill-in-the-blanks form to collect confidential tales from people who normally would not bring their complaints to Congress.

"We don't need your name but we want the details. In order to root out waste you have to root it out from the inside out," said Kasich, R-Ohio, Thursday.

"We're going to give the American people the opportunity to help us police every federal agency," added Rep. Saxby Chambliss, R-Ga., the committee's vice chairman.

If the anonymous whistleblowers provide enough detail in their tales, "We will take them and we will investigate them," Kasich said.

Net links Bateman viewers to B

By JESSICA OROZCO

Between 800 and 1,000 people throughout the United States viewed President Merrill J. Bateman's question and answer session live on the Internet Thursday afternoon.

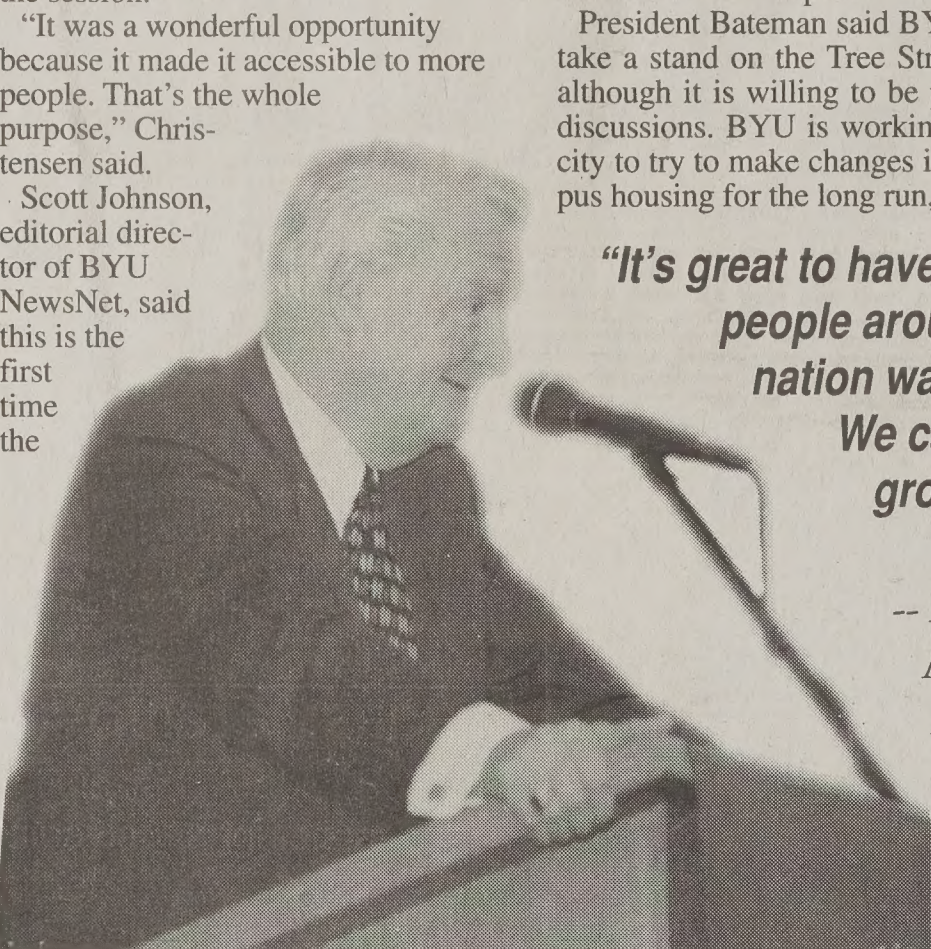

President Bateman said he was surprised about the turnout they had online.

"I only expected about 20 people to watch," he said. "It's great to have young people around the nation watching. We can only grow from here."

Brandon Christensen, Student Advisory Council vice president, said he was also excited about the netcast of the session.

"It was a wonderful opportunity because it made it accessible to more people. That's the whole purpose," Christensen said.

Scott Johnson, editorial director of BYU NewsNet, said this is the first time the BYU President Merrill J. Bateman fields questions at a question and answer session Thursday in the Wilkinson Student Center Terrace. The biannual session was transmitted, for the first time, via the Internet.

GOP hopefuls debate, criticize absentee Bush

Associated Press

HANOVER, N.H. — Republican presidential hopefuls discussed abortion, health care and taxes Thursday night in a generally polite campaign debate spiced by jabs directed by Steve Forbes and Gary Bauer at the absent front-runner, George W. Bush.

But for the most part, the five men on stage stuck to the issues, refraining from attacking one another.

Forbes, a wealthy magazine publisher, Sen. Orrin Hatch, Bauer and radio commentator Alan Keyes all said the nation's health care system needs reforming. Each offered slightly different prescriptions, and none made any immediate attempt to draw distinctions with his rivals.

Together, the five men participated in a debate sponsored by CNN and WMUR-TV. It was the second such event in two nights in the state where the first presidential primary ballots of 2000 will be cast in January.

Onstage before the television cameras began rolling, the candidates fielded questions from the audience on gay rights and China.

Bush, the GOP front-runner by far, granted an interview to the Manchester television station two hours before the camera was switched on for the debate.

Appearing with his wife, Laura, Bush said he knows the forum is important, but that his family comes first and it is more important to him to be at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, where she was being honored.

"My family is important to me, and I think the people of New Hampshire will recognize that," he said.

"I know I've got a lot of work to do, I take nothing for granted," he said.

Bush has agreed to participate in the next GOP debate, in Manchester on Dec. 2.

"I'm looking forward to participating," he said.

This is the second time in a week the Republicans have debated without Bush.

The New York Times reported that Forbes has been selling shares in the financial magazine that bears his name to raise money for his presidential bid. Forbes said he is not breaching campaign finance laws, but would not disclose the price people are paying. Bauer demanded that he do so.

question and answer session was transmitted over the Internet. It was broadcast both in video and audio form.

Those who could not watch the video could listen to it through audio, he said. Most of the people used the video form.

About 15 questions were sent to President Bateman through e-mail from different parts of the United States, including California, Texas, South Dakota and Kansas, Johnson said.

Christensen said President Bateman answered six of the fifteen questions that were received.

The questions ranged from topics concerning BYU health insurance to BYU's stand on the debate of the Tree Streets east of campus.

President Bateman said BYU did not take a stand on the Tree Streets issue, although it is willing to be part of the discussions. BYU is working with the city to try to make changes in off-campus housing for the long run, he said.

"It's great to have young people around the nation watching. We can only grow from here."

-- President Merrill J. Bateman

Another question addressed in the session was about scholarships. President Bateman said every student already has a scholarship since tuition is so low. Despite the fact, $56 million was added to the scholarship fund and the church contributed $3 million more.

Having the question and answer session online is an extension of President Bateman's goal of expanding to the world, Johnson said.

Pilot programs for online courses in Fiji, Brazil and Mexico are part of this expansion. The programs will allow students from those countries to take courses online, Bateman said.

He addressed a student's question about the price of tuition for those wanting to take courses online. President Bateman said BYU will take into consideration the fact that students wanting to take courses online cannot afford it.

Johnson said more or less are going to be transmitting Internet in the future.

In the past, NewsNet conference online and 100,000 people watched it, Johnson said.

"In the future, we'll have the state capitol and regional news center, never done this before."

BYUSA haunted house to horrify Y

NewsNet Services

The East Ballroom in the Wilkinson Student Center will turn into a haunted house Saturday night as part of The Scream, an annual Halloween party, presented by BYUSA.

Derek Wride, the chairperson of the haunted house, said his committee of 25 volunteers has thought of good ideas to make it scary. "A trip was made to the slaughterhouse for props," Wride said.

There will also be a swing dance, top 40s dance, games and prizes.

Wride said he's glad there is a campus Halloween activity, even though there are other local parties and haunted houses to visit.

"We are competing with other Halloween activities, but those who come to The Scream won't be disappointed," he said.

Andrea Baldwin, the executive director of campus activities, said she is planning for 6,000 people.

In the past, there have been spook alleys. This is the first year there has been a haunted house, she said.

There were a lot of electronic prizes donated, Baldwin said.

"If students come and enjoy themselves, then (the planning committee) will know we were successful," she said.

The Scream will start at 8:30 p.m. and goes until midnight. It costs $3 with costume or a student ID and $4 without. No masks or cross-dressing is allowed.

Have a movie, popcorn and a drink on us!

NewsNet (The Daily Universe, KBYU-TV News, KBYU-FM News, CCN News and NewsNet.byu.edu) and Cinemark Theaters invite 3,000 BYU folks to a free movie, including popcorn and a drink.

Yep. You read that right. NewsNet and Cinemark are going to invite 3,000 people to a free NewsNet Night at the new Cinemark 16-plex theaters in the Provo Towne Centre. Every day we publish, beginning Monday, Nov. 1 and continuing through Nov. 9, The Daily Universe is going to print randomly-generated lists of winners of tickets, good for the NewsNet Night at Cinemark, Wednesday, Nov 10, 1999. Each list will be printed only once. If your name appears in any of those lists, you need only to come to the NewsNet offices on the fifth floor of the Wilkinson Center during normal business hours (9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. M-F) with a photo id of yourself. You will receive TWO (count 'em, TWO) tickets for the the 7:30 p.m. showing of any of the 16 movies showing the night of Nov. 10, 1999. The movies will all be either current or recent releases. The tickets will include popcorn, soda and video games during that night.

You MUST come in person to pick up your tickets, but you can pick them up any time from the date your name appears through November 10. Only one set of tickets per person.

AND, and, AND!

If your name appears in The Daily Universe from Nov. 1 1999 through Nov. 10, 1999, whether it is in a news story, an advertisement or any other printed form, you will also be eligible to win the tickets, if you can convince us you are the person named in the paper. Keep in mind that we ONLY have 3,000 tickets and they will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis, so if your name appears but you procrastinate picking up your tickets, they MAY be GONE by the time you get here. When they are all distributed, the fun is over and you will just be out of luck. As a consolation prize, you can have a free copy of the day's Daily Universe. Since this game is free, we set the rules and can change them on a whim, so don't make us mad.

Y-built bridge unveiled today

By EMILY SMURTHWAITE
emily@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The ribbon-cutting ceremony for a new bridge built by BYU students will be today at 11 a.m. over Petetneet Creek in Payson Canyon Park.

The students who built the bridge are from the BYU chapter of American Society of Civil Engineers.

Layne Jones, 24, a senior from Twin Falls, Idaho, majoring in civil engineering, said the project is a good way to help the community and learn more about engineering.

Jones said the ASCE members are required to do service hours every semester.

Communities and cities propose service projects for the club to do, he said.

The bridge, which is 40 feet long and 4 feet wide, is made from a fiberglass and resin material, Jones said.

The bridge was also built to be wheelchair-accessible.

Jones said the bridge should last 80-100 years because of the composite materials used.

"We want the people in the community to enjoy the bridge and count on it for a number of years," he said.

The bridge weighs 4,200 pounds; a similar steel bridge would weigh 12 tons, Jones said.

"This is the first composite bridge we've built. To my knowledge this is the first composite bridge in Utah," he said.

Keith Steurer, 24, a civil engineering graduate student from Madison Wis., was in charge of designing and building the bridge with Jones.

Steurer said the project was successful because the students provided a leading-edge bridge for the city at a good price. They were able to do this because companies donated materials and services and ASCE members volunteered their time, he said.

The ASCE will build a pavilion in Springville next semester.

Students to sow pink tulips for breast cancer

By LATRICIA NELL
latricia@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

In an effort to increase awareness of breast cancer, BYU's Women's Services invites all students to join them in planting pink tulips today at noon.

"The pink tulips are a hope thing. We plant them in the fall and they come up in the spring," said Meg Thunell, 20, a junior from Holladay, Salt Lake County, majoring in public relations. She is the head of the tulip project.

She said according to the American Cancer Society, breast cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death. Only lung cancer causes more death among women.

Thunell said she believed everyone will be affected by breast cancer at some time in their lives. She said there are three people in her family who have breast cancer.

One out of eight women in the United States will battle breast cancer, according to a SEER Cancer Statistics Review in a 1997 study. And one out of every 29 women who fight the disease will die.

The risk factors for developing breast cancer are associated with personal characteristics.

Besides being female, age is the most important risk factor for the development of breast cancer, said I. C. Henderson in a clinical study for the American Cancer Society in 1994. The possibility for breast cancer increases with age.

Former Sen. calls for political ethics

By MEAGAN BRUNSON
meagan@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Sen. Warren B. Rudman told BYU students that they have a responsibility to help make U.S. politics and journalism more ethical at Thursday's International Media Studies symposium in the Madsen Recital Hall of the Harris Fine Arts Center.

BYU students with excellent learning opportunities and high grade point averages should take advantage of these by learning as much as they can about politics, Rudman said.

"If you let all this go to waste and don't work to change the system, that's not good," Rudman said.

"There are people who would give an arm and a leg to sit where you're sitting," Rudman encouraged BYU students to pay attention to issues and participate in political campaigns.

"It's your life. If you don't get involved, you'll get exactly what you deserve," he said.

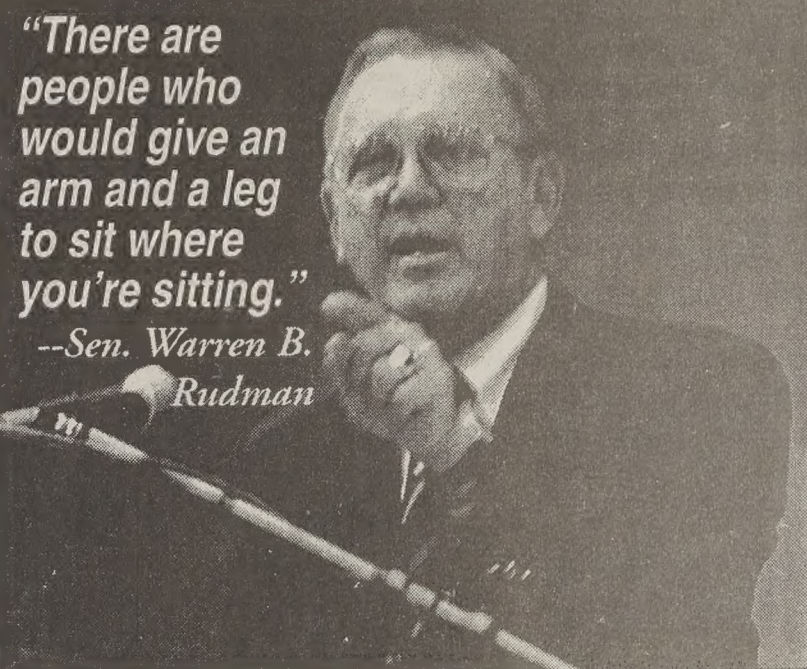

Rudman said BYU is a remarkable university because its students probably have a better concept of faith-based values than students on an average college campus.

Rudman addressed ethics in today's political scene in relationship to political leaders and journalists.

He said the word "ethics" means different things to different people, but requires truth telling in every circumstance.

"Politicians have the absolute duty to tell the truth or say no comment," Rudman said.

"There are people who would give an arm and a leg to sit where you're sitting."

SCAM NOTICE

1. Three e-mail notices soliciting envelope stuffing jobs for a company called Mohw were received by a staff member in the W.W. Clyde Engineering Building. The individual responded by sending $35 for supplies that were never received. The individual had been given three e-mail addresses to contact Mohw, but they were all slightly different and none appeared to be working. After several unsuccessful attempts to contact the Mohw Company, which is reportedly in Studio City, Calif., the solicitations are determined to be fraudulent.

The University Police would like to alert people of this scam and others like it. University Police encourage people not to send money or information to any unknown individuals.

TRESPASSING

2. A Provo police officer observed three individuals trespassing in Cougar Stadium on Friday around 2:30 a.m. The officer reported the incident to the University Police who made contact and interviewed the individuals at the scene. The three individuals were visitors to campus and were placed on a 72-hour ban from campus.

STORY from page 1

Ken Crossley, the chairman of the Performing Arts Series, said that although the stories will be told in Japanese, simultaneous translation will be provided to members of the audience via live interpreter.

"Everyone that wants to hear the translations will have earphones to hear the stories in English," Crossley said.

The interpreter, Leon Ingulsrud, and Shiraishi are working together for the first time. Although she normally doesn't use an interpreter when she performs, Shiraishi said because of the nature of Hyakumonogatari, an interpreter is necessary for English-speaking audiences to grasp the full meaning.

However, language is not the only factor in understanding Shiraishi's tales.

Scott Miller, an associate professor of Japanese, said traditionally Japanese professional storytellers rely on facial expression, body movement and their voice to conjure up emotions in the audience and avoid the use of props. Miller, who has seen Shiraishi's performances on video, said the actress stays true to this tradition.

"I anticipate Shiraishi will make this performance entertaining as well as actually frightening. She has an extremely powerful voice," Miller said.

Lawrence said that much of the power in Shiraishi's performance comes from her unique ability to take on the several roles in the stories she reads.

"She flows from character to character and creates the story. It's amazing how she can weave such a complex web as a solo actress. Most of the meaning of the story comes through the actress," Lawrence said.

Contrary to western countries, the time for ghost stories in Japan is usually during the summer, Miller said.

The fact that Shiraishi is coming right before Halloween is "fortuitous timing," Miller said.

The performance is at 7:30 Saturday in the Nelke Theater in the HFAC. Tickets are $10 for general admission and $8 with a student ID.

Cougars close season with 4-0 win

By JENNIFER GROSKREUTZ
jgroskreutz@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

The BYU women's soccer team closed its season with a 4-0 shutout against Long Beach State Thursday night. The Cougars dominated the game with 33 shots, holding the Lobos to seven. This was BYU's 12th win at South Field, giving them an undefeated home record and an overall season record of 17-3.

BYU busted into the first half scoring twice in the first 12 minutes. Sophomore midfielder Sarah Higham found the net less than 10 minutes into the game. She said she was lucky it went in.

"I was looking to chip it, and it went higher than I anticipated. I was kind of lucky."

She was assisted by junior forward Kim Lowe.

Junior forward Sara Reading was next to nail the net for the Cougars twice. Her first goal came in the 12th minute. About two minutes later, she headed the ball in. She has scored four times in the last three games.

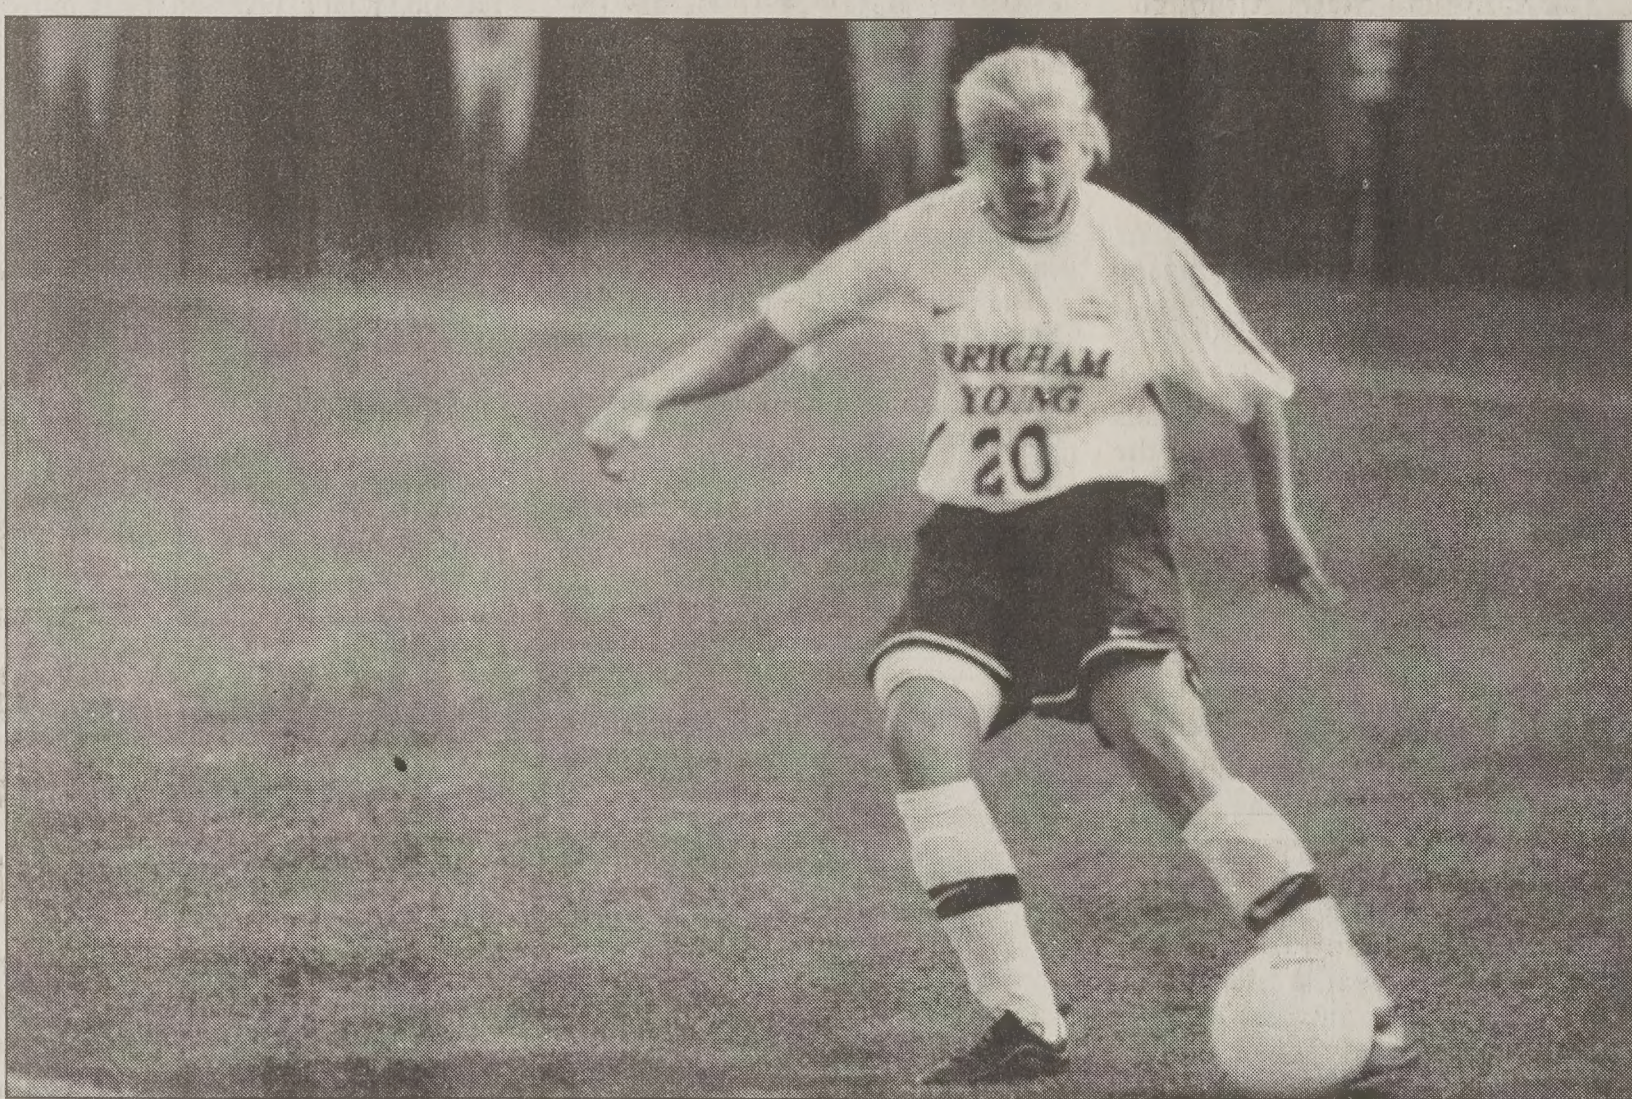

"I've been finding the back of the net," she said.

Both of Reading's goals were off assists by senior forward Karen Robbins-Wunderli. Head coach Jennifer Rockwood was pleased with the team's performance.

"We came out really strong. We scored nice, quick goals. It was a full team effort tonight," she said.

The most emotional goal of the evening was by senior All-American Maren Hendershot in the second half. She said she felt frazzled after some of her shots didn't connect in the beginning of the first half.

"All I wanted was one goal for my last night," she said.

Ethan Scott/Daily Universe

BYU All-American Maren Hendershot attempts to cross the ball during Thursday's game with Long Beach State. The Cougars won 4-0, improving the team's record to 17-3 on the season.

Hendershot played to the crowd Thursday just like she does in every game. She ran around waving her arms in the air to get the fans excited before the game started.

"The crowd is so much a part of my BYU experience. I just wanted to have one last goal with them," she said as tears filled her eyes. "It's not necessarily the goal, it's just the feeling afterwards."

Four seniors were honored before the game began, and all of them started in the first half. Hendershot, defender Shannon Kimball, defender Leanne Johnson-Weaver, and forward Robbins-Wunderli, were the honorees. Rockwood said Shannon Kimball did a good job of starting.

Rockwood said she was proud of the team for achieving its 11th shutout of the season and for scoring 14 goals in the last three games. She also said the Cougars are looking forward to the MWC tournament next week.

"This is why we played 20 games, to get ready for next weekend," she said.

Rockwood said another benefit of Thursday's game was the quality playing time the reserves received. "We have a lot of younger reserves that need to build up their confidence. Anytime they get good minutes is great," she said.

The women's volleyball team is coming home after a five-day road trip to face New Mexico tonight and Air Force on Saturday on its home court. Both matches will be played at 7 p.m.

The Cougars are 17-3 overall and 6-1 in the Mountain West Conference, tying with Colorado State for first place. They are ranked No. 11 and Colorado is ranked No. 12 in the AVCA/USA Today poll.

BYU is coming off wins against Wyoming, Arizona State and No. 18 University of Arizona, and one loss to Colorado State. The Cougars rested this week after their long road trip and will start practice again today before tonight's match.

BYU beat New Mexico at New Mexico when the two teams played earlier this season. The Cougars dominated, winning the match in three games 15-8, 15-1 and 15-8.

The Lobos are 7-17 in the MWC. In conference, the Lobos are No. 2 in digs and No. 7 in the kill setting. The Lobos also has the No. 10 kill per game.

BYU team captain said the Cougars are expecting an easy win. "No matter who we keep our intensity up,"

Air Force, which played the WAC last year with a 12-1 record, is having a surprising season with an overall record of 12-1 and 4-3 in the MWC.

"Air Force is doing New Mexico is coming pretty big wins," Bowdler said. "We have to fire it up with them."

BYU beat Air Force in three games. The Cougars only won the now two. Head coach Elmer said his team will be better in the match.

Y rugby set for rival U

By KEVIN FRANSON
franson@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

According to Coach David Smythe, the BYU men's rugby team will face a formidable opponent it squares off with the University of Utah on Saturday afternoon.

"They are definitely a force to be reckoned with," Smythe said.

The Cougars will play their second road game of the fall season as they travel to Salt Lake City to play the Utes. Even though the Utah men's rugby team has never beaten the Cougars, Coach Smythe expects a tough game.

"They haven't got us yet, but every year is going to be the year they finally get us. They always play hard," Smythe said.

The rivalry between BYU and the University of Utah in any sport is legendary and it's definitely present on the rugby field.

The dislike stems from more than just the typical enmity between the two schools, but also from players on both sides of the game playing together at Highland High School.

A BYU rugby player drags down an opponent during a game vs. Colorado on Saturday at Haws Field. The Cougars will take on the University of Utah on Saturday in Salt Lake City.

Ethan Scott/Daily Universe

The Highland Rams rugby program is famous for winning numerous national championships in recent history.

Brian Westenskow, a BYU forward and Highland High alumnus, knows the importance of this game to his friends playing for the Utes.

"I went to high school with these guys and for them this is the Super Bowl," Westenskow said. "They live for this game and they are playing for respect."

Along with the added pressure of former teammates playing on opposite sides of the ball, the game will take on a more heightened mental element.

According to coach Mark Ormsby, a game at this point in the season will hinge on which team will be able to mentally execute a game plan as it happens on the field.

"At this point, it's not about getting the men fit, it's not about running and tackling. It is a mind game," Ormsby said.

Lacrosse team looks to claim 'Best of West' title in Vegas

By RYAN HAMILTON

The BYU lacrosse team will look for victory on the road in the pre-season Best of the West Invitational on Saturday in Las Vegas.

Six teams will compete, including defending national champion Colorado State University. Not every team is a part of BYU's league, but all participating teams will compete for a chance at the national title later in the season.

This is the tournament's second year. It was devised as an opportunity for teams to get playing experience before the actual season begins. Although Saturday's tournament will not affect the team's overall standing for regular-season play, BYU head coach Jason Lamb said it will provide a springboard for the season.

"This is an opportunity to go down and get as a team,"

BYU team member Rex Hardy said.

Lamb said he is confident about his team's ability to come away from the tournament successful.

"I don't think I've felt this good going into an event this big in a long time," Lamb said.

Lamb's confidence stems from his team's cohesiveness. The coach said BYU has survived on talent in past years, but he feels that this year his team has developed a better ability to work together.

"The guys are doing great things. They are working for each other," Lamb said.

Lamb admitted the team is not as deep as it has been in the past, but said it will get some of that depth back as the season approaches. The team expects to get back four or five players in January.

BYU has had success on a national level. The Cougars took a national championship in 1997 and earned a second-place national title the following year.

First Conference representative ESPN will be in to see the first-ever Mountain West Conference championship game. The women's race will be at Provo's East Bay Golf Course at 4:30 p.m. and the men's race will be at 5 p.m. The women's race will feature a class of 13 BYU and earlier this year BYU and Utah 10th at the state meet. "I'm not overlooking Colorado State, they have a great individual and are well-coached," women's coach Patrick Shane said. good runners who will challenge BYU's top runners, but BYU has a depth advantage. Two of Utah's runners, Travis Hildebrand and Chris Merkley, have four of the conference's six best times this year. BYU's John Hedengren has two of the top six times. "Hopefully we can match and surpass them," James said. But it wouldn't be an easy victory. The team will be without the services of one of its top runners, Dula Parkinson, who will sit out because of illness. Matt Poulsen is another runner who James hopes will perform well. Poulsen was BYU's top runner last year, but has suffered from illness and allergies this season. He had his best finish at the Roy Griak Invitational in Minnesota, but has struggled in the other two meets in which he has run. "If Matt Poulsen had a good day (at the pre-NCAA meet), we could've been third," James said. "On any given day he could be our No. 1 man." James is also looking for strong performances from Gary Wilson and Trevor Pettingill. The No. 3 women's team will have its toughest competition from No. 22 Colorado State. Although the Cougars are highly favored to win the meet, both Elizabeth Roodell of Colorado State and Johanna Nielson of Utah will battle BYU's top runners for the No. 1 spot. "I'm not overlooking Colorado State, they have a great individual and are well-coached," women's coach Patrick Shane said. also battle for the top spot. "We're also racing ourselves," Shane said. "The most basic concept is the footrace. To win you have to beat other athletes, including your teammates." Shane said the footraces between the athletes makes cross country an exciting sport. Throughout the race, athletes will be battling against each other. Freshmen Sarah Ellet and Sherida Rogers are both candidates for the MWC Freshman of the Year award. Ellet was BYU's fourth runner two weeks ago at the pre-NCAA meet. The award will be presented at today's meet. Both coaches said they expect a good turnout for the event. "We're excited to host another meet here," Shane said. "We have one of the finest spectator courses in the country." "When we do things, everything is first class. We showcase every event." ESPN is bringing a crew to do a 30-minute special on the event.

"I think Air Force is playing a whole lot better than in the past," she said. "They've had some significant wins and played tough when we were there, especially in the first game. I think if you overlook them you get into trouble." Middle blocker Melissa Layton said the team will work on serving better and coming out strong in the beginning of the game rather than starting down in the score. Bower also pointed out slow beginnings as a team weakness. "We need to get off to a better start," she said. "I think that will be our goal for this weekend." Michaelis said she may try a few different line-ups. "Sunny (Tonga) is playing so well and we've got to figure out a way to work her into the line-up more," she said. "Melissa is doing real well in the middle, and we'll probably rest Mari (Carpenter) for a few weeks." Carpenter, the conference attack leader, has been struggling with a back problem.

winning ways. "It's a problem," the Cougars face an offense that Atuaia says is athletic. "It's big but they're quick," that "It's so special to be a part of BYU football. Especially with Coach Edwards — he's a football icon. And this year we're in a really good position to make something special out of the season." —Owen Pochman, BYU kicker

Air Force brings the nation's second-ranked rushing attack to Cougar Stadium with an average of 292.8 yards per game. "We've got our work cut out for us to get ready for it," Edwards said of the Falcons' "flexbone" attack, an offensive scheme similar to the wishbone. "They do such a great job of executing it that it's hard to defend." The Cougars will fight to defend the Air Force ground game and keep their perfect conference record intact. A win would not only be Edwards' 250th, but would give BYU a 7-1 record overall, matching the start of the '96 team which went 14-1 and finished the season ranked fifth nationally. "It's so special to be a part of BYU football," Pochman said. "Especially with Coach Edwards — he's a football icon. And this year we're in a really good position to make something special out of the season."

A.F. candidates: Bond in question

By JENNY CAPPS and SHERALYN BOLE
capps@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

American Fork residents will vote Tuesday on a $15 million bond for improved public facilities.

The bond includes plans for a new city hall and police station on Church Street. It also calls for construction of new ambulance and fire departments on city property at 400 N. and Center.

Although some American Fork residents and city council candidates support the bond, others say that more planning is needed.

City council candidates Tom Hunter, Grant Parker and Ricky Storrs support the bond. Parker said the city is already five years behind schedule and needs new facilities immediately.

"We need to plan for future growth. It's not going to go away — it's only going to get more expensive," Parker said.

Storrs said American Fork will not be prepared for natural disasters without the new buildings.

"We need to get moving and quit putting it off," he said.

However, city council candidate R. Kent Evans said he has mixed emotions about the bond. Although the city has a critical need for new buildings, its residents do not need more debt, he said. The Alpine school district has already raised property taxes in American Fork once this year and plans to increase taxes again next year.

Some residents are also concerned about the proposed location of the fire and ambulance departments.

Grover and Melissa Ward are elders of the Harvest Fellowship Church, which is east of the site where the new buildings would be built. They said because their church members use the parking lot during services and activities, they are worried that if their members are forced to park on the street, neighbors may become upset.

The proposed location would also create traffic problems, said resident Noraleen Day. She said it is difficult to see oncoming cars when exiting the vacant parking lot onto Center Street.

"Every family along this street has had their car hit," Day said. To make access easier for emergency vehicles, major work would have to be done on Center Street, she said.

City council candidate Judy Price said the city should wait for more community support before constructing the buildings.

"If the buildings are constructed without enough support, the apathy in the community will continue to grow," she said.

Price also said the city government could wait until funds become available and build one facility at a time.

"I would like to be sure the community is ready for the buildings and make sure they approve an increase in taxes for each one," she said.

City council candidate Keith S. Blake said remodeling the fire and police stations is also an option because it would be cheaper and faster than building new ones.

"The bond doesn't give us expanded police facilities for two years; the needs are now," Blake said.

Orem candidates may turn on lights

By ANNIE GARDNER
annie@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

With Orem City elections only four days away, Orem City Council candidates are pounding the pavement, sharing their platforms and discussing resident concerns.

Two concerns on the minds of many Orem residents are city-wide lighting and the protection of their neighborhoods from encroaching commercial development.

Kim Poole, secretary for the Windsor Community Committee, said that lighting is a major issue in her neighborhood and that most people do not care how the lighting is paid for, they just want lights.

"We've (city and the neighborhoods) been talking about this since February and we're still at square one," she said.

Poole said that the city keeps requesting neighborhood committees before it will consider lights. However, even though she recognizes the importance of neighborhood input, it might actually be slowing down the process, Poole said.

"You can't please all of the people all of the time," she said.

Mike Vanchiere, 44, a city council candidate, agreed.

"We've got to forget about pleasing everybody. We need to make a decision and do it," Vanchiere said.

Judy Bell, 60, an incumbent city council member, said the city-wide lighting program is complex and input from residents is necessary to make the right choice because it all comes down to funding.

"It costs the citizens to do it, so they need to decide how they want to do it," she said.

Jim Evans, 44, mayoral candidate, said that the Orem City Council has been throwing the idea of city-wide lighting around for a long time and that resident input is important to city council decision making.

"We need to take it back to the neighborhoods, let everyone know about it, consolidate the information and let the council make the best decision," Evans said.

Dave Palfreyman, 45, an incumbent city council member, said he sees many options for funding city-wide lighting and that Orem communities need to receive it according to priority.

"We need to light up higher crime areas first and then churches and schools and so on. I want to do it right. I want to look at all the options we have for funding the project," Palfreyman said.

Defining zoning area is another major issue for Orem residents.

"It's a planning and balancing issue," said Chris Stevenson, secretary for the Scera Park neighborhood committee and a resident on 800 South near Costco.

He said he sees commercial creep and indiscernible lines between residential and commercial areas in the city as a problem.

Les Campbell, 54, city council candidate, said he won't vote for big developments in Orem.

"Once our land is developed, the only direction we can build is up," he said. "I'm going to be tougher on zoning and developers. We need to be careful and selective about what we allow to be developed in the city."

Residents in Lehi call for traffic light on Main Street

By CORRINNA BONET
corrinna@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

An explosion growth in Lehi has brought concerns about Main Street traffic to the forefront of the city's agenda.

Growth within Lehi, as well as in the surrounding communities of Saratoga Springs and Eagle Mountain, has caused an increase in Main Street traffic that the infrastructure isn't equipped to handle, said Lorin Powell, Lehi City engineer.

While residents have voiced their concerns, the city has limited power over the situation.

Main Street is a section of State Route 73, the Utah Department of Transportation (UDOT), has jurisdiction over the area.

"There has been good, frequent communication between the city of Lehi and UDOT in regards to this matter, and we're taking the necessary steps to deal with the problem," said Doug Bassett, region three traffic engineer for UDOT.

The intersections of Main Street and 500 West and Main Street and Center Street are the biggest problems, Powell said.

UDOT placed counters at these intersections several weeks ago to monitor traffic and determine whether traffic lights were warranted.

"A traffic light is close to being warranted at the 500 West and Main Street intersection, and is not warranted at the Main Street and Center Street intersection," Bassett said.

If growth patterns continue, it is likely that a light will be warranted at the 500 West intersection within two years, Bassett said.

In order for a traffic signal to be warranted, an intersection must have a specified amount of traffic, which is determined by the Federal Highway Administration.

While Lehi isn't responsible for funding improvements on Main Street, they have put forth funding for traffic lights in the past.

"When working with UDOT, compromise is what makes things happen," said Robert J. Fox, an incumbent in next week's election.

Funds contributed by the city may speed up design and construction of a project, but only if that project is warranted, Bassett said.

"Money is definitely the issue — you have to understand their (UDOT's) processes, and when you do, doors open," said Mark Johnson, candidate for Lehi City Council.

Alternatives to a new traffic signal, including the construction of a roundabout, are being considered by UDOT and city officials.

Dr. S. Kent Brown joined the BYU faculty in 1971. His degrees include a BA from the University of California at Berkeley in Greek with a minor in Near Eastern languages and a PhD in religious studies from Brown University with an emphasis in New Testament and early Christian studies.

Professor Brown served as director of the BYU Jerusalem Center for Near Eastern Studies from 1993 to 1996. From 1984 to 1990 he led a project sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Mormon Archaeology and Research Foundation to microfilm more than 1,500 ancient Christian manuscripts in Cairo and Jerusalem. He has also been a fellow of both BYU's Jerusalem Center and the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies.

The author of more than 70 published essays, Dr. Brown has also served as a member of the board of editors for the Encyclopedia of Mormonism, as a managing editor for The Coptic Encyclopedia, and now as an associate editor for the Journal of Book of Mormon Studies. He is a co-editor of the Historical Atlas of Mormonism. His most recent publications include From Jerusalem to Zarahemla: Literary and Historical Studies of the Book of Mormon and his edition of Jacques Tagher's Christians in Muslim Egypt.

Brother Brown is married to the former Gayle Oblad, and they are the parents of five children and grandparents of eleven.

Dainon Haggard, right, his sister Camille and his mom, Becky, wait in line, with hopes of being selected to appear on The Price is Right. Dainon's debut on the game show will be broadcast Monday night 6:30 p.m.

Familiar Y faces grace game shows, win prizes

By KRIS BOYLE
kris@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Dainon Haggard had a dream. He wanted to follow in the footsteps of his mother, grandmother and uncle. Just like them, he wanted to "come on down" and be the next contestant on the Price is Right.

Haggard, 18, a sophomore from Provo with an open major, can be seen fulfilling his dream as a contestant on the game show Monday at 9 a.m. on CBS.

Haggard said he traveled to California in June with his mom and older sister with the intent to be on the game show.

He said they first got in line at 6:30 a.m. and found that some people had been in line all night. After getting tickets, they waited for three hours while the producer interviewed all 300 audience members, 10 at a time.

To his surprise, Haggard was the second person called to "contestant's row" at the beginning of the show.

Haggard was the third contestant to come up on stage after bidding the closest on 24 Waterford crystal glasses. Haggard said he played "Buy or Sell," where he was shown three items: a bed, a weight system and two love seats with a footstool. Haggard had to decide whether he would buy or sell each item, based on the prices quoted to him.

Haggard guessed correctly on all three, so he got to keep them, along with the difference between the given price and the actual value. The total came to nearly $9,000.

"It was like a dream come true to actually be on stage and win prizes," Haggard said.

Haggard is not the only BYU face to be seen on a television game show. Jeannie Reeves, a receptionist at the information desk of the Abraham O. Smoot Building, also experienced game show fame 30 years ago when she and her husband participated in The Newlywed Game.

They had been married six months when Reeves said they saw an advertisement looking for contestants and decided to respond. After going through an interview process with many other couples, they were invited to be on the show.

At the end of the game, Reeves and her husband were tied with another couple, so an additional question was asked. Reeves said she still remembers the tie-breaking question: "What's the most expensive wedding gift you received?"

Reeves said she toyed with two answers: their television and her rings. She said the couples had been coached to always go with the first answer that comes to mind, so she chose the television. She made the right choice and they won.

Reeves and her husband received luggage, a set of knives and other gifts. The big prize, Reeves said, was a room full of furniture. Reeves said she considered this a blessing because they were able to sell the furniture to help pay for schooling.

Tree Streets may be settled by Provo study

By ROB ROGERS
rob@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Provo Mayor Lewis Billings proposed Thursday morning to form a study committee to research the Tree Streets proposal and present it to the planning commission on Jan. 26. The study committee will announce today if they think that studying the Tree Streets proposal is feasible.

The mayor has left open a 10-day question/comment period for anyone who has a question about the proposal that they want addressed by the study committee.

Planning Commissioner Roy Peterman suggested that the study committee meet with the Tree Streets neighborhood before the planning commission meeting to inform on the progress and direction of the proposal's study.

However, not everybody thinks a study committee is the answer.

"I think that study has been done, it's in the General Plan," said Craig Carlisle, a planning commissioner. He was the only person to oppose the planning commission's decisions on Oct. 13, sending the proposal to the mayor's office for further study.

Provo's General Plan was written over three years, and it specifically details the future growth plan. Many of the same studies that the study committee will be investigating, like the property value of Provo homes based on ownership, what legally constitutes a family and how the city can logistically enforce its land use laws, are in the General Plan.

Commissioners were concerned that displacing renters and dictating who could own homes in the Tree Streets area could bring discrimination lawsuits and that the city might not be able to enforce the new zoning law called for in the proposal. Commissioners also wanted to know where displaced renters would move when Provo has zero occupancy, no unoccupied apartments to house incoming renters.

"We do not have enough information," said planning commissioner Royden Shurtz about not having enough knowledge of the proposal or its potential effects on the neighborhood and its residents.

Armenia gunmen give up, 8 dead

Associated Press

YEREVAN, Armenia — Nationalist gunmen whose attack on parliament killed eight top Armenian officials, including the prime minister, turned in their weapons and surrendered Thursday, freeing the dozens of hostages they had held during their overnight siege.

Hundreds of police and army troops with armored personnel carriers had surrounded the parliament building in this former Soviet republic throughout the night. Authorities had been considering using special forces to end the standoff with the five attackers.

The takeover at the parliament building ended after President Robert Kocharian promised the gunmen a fair trial and allowed a recorded statement by their leader to be broadcast on national television.

"We wanted to save the Armenian people from perishing and restore their rights," Nairi Unanian, an ardent nationalist and ex-journalist, said in the recorded statement. "Those responsible for robbing the country must face trial along with us."

Armenia, like many ex-Soviet republics, has been mired in economic chaos for years, stuck between the failed Soviet system and largely unsuccessful efforts to build a market economy. Corruption is rampant, with some officials allegedly diverting public funds.

The gunmen released some 40 hostages and handed in weapons to police before being escorted from the building with at least one hostage to ensure their safety. The freed hostages, mainly government officials and lawmakers, were checked by doctors.

The prosecutor-general filed charges of terrorism and attempting to weaken state power against the gunmen. The charges carry a prison sentence of 10 to 15 years in prison, or the death penalty — though there has been a moratorium on capital punishment since 1994.

Kocharian said the nation would be in mourning from Friday through Sunday, the day when the victims are to be buried.

During his taped address, Unanian accused the government of Kocharian and slain Prime Minister Vazgen Sarkisian of allowing the country to disintegrate. He also accused the country's elite of bleeding the economy dry with corruption and called for a national renewal to restore pride and prosperity.

He said he had not wanted to kill anybody, just to scare lawmakers. But earlier he said the killing of the prime minister had been deliberate.

He also claimed that guards had opened fire, forcing the gunmen to fire back.

The gunmen burst into the chamber Wednesday and killed Sarkisian and Parliament Speaker Karen Demirchian.

The entire Cabinet was present for a question-and-answer session.

There was no explanation of how the gunmen, who apparently hid their automatic rifles under long overcoats, were able to get into the parliament chamber.

However, the Defense Ministry demanded the prosecutor-general, interior minister and national security service chief be fired over the killings.
